This research is conducted based on the capital market phenomenon in advanced countries and Moslem countries that needs further investigation. This is related to the developing roles of capital market in the mobilization of funds to the real sector, the demand of the sale securities that must be in line with Islamic sharia, and the effort to attract investors to the sharia capital market. The milestone of Indonesia sharia market began when Indonesia Sharia Stock Index (ISSI) was released. ISSI is the first sharia stock in Indonesia that comprises of all the sharia stock released on Indonesia Stock Exchange (BEI) in 2011.

The research problems in this thesis are formulated as follows: (1) Does debt to asset affect trading volume in commerce, service, and investment companies at ISSI? (2) Does debt to equity affect trading volume in commerce, service, and investment companies at ISSI? (3) Does return on asset affect trading volume in commerce, service, and investment companies at ISSI? (4) Does return on equity affect trading volume in commerce, service, and investment companies at ISSI? (5) Does dividend affect trading volume in commerce, service, and investment companies at ISSI? (6) Does dividend moderate capital structure and profitability on trading volume in commerce, service, and investment companies at ISSI?

This research adopted quantitative approach. The kind of the research was causal research. The sample were taken by using nonprobability sampling and purposive sampling. The data used were the secondary data that were obtained from the finance report data of the companies registered at ISSI during 2015-2018. Data analysis method adopted Moderated Regression Analysis (MRA).

This research showed that (1) debt to asset, debt to equity, return on asset, and return on equity wholly and significantly affect the performance of sharia stock; (2) dividend affected trading volume; and (3) dividend moderated capital structure and profitability on the performance of sharia stock.
