

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTION

After analyzing and interpreting the data, the researcher present conclusion and suggestion in this chapter. The researcher represents the answer of this research problem. The researcher also gives for the next researchers who are interested in this topic.

A. Conclusion

Based on the finding and discussion, the writer concludes as follows:

1. The types of language function that used by “Spider-Man: Into the Spider-Verse” movie script are Emotive Function, Directive Function, Phatic Function, Poetic Function, Referential Function, Metalinguistic Function, Contextual Function.
2. The dominant of language function that used by “Spider-Man: Into the Spider-Verse” movie script is Emotive Function.

B. Suggestion

The researcher realized that this research is far from perfect because this research still has many things that must be corrected. The researcher suggest to the next researchers to choose other object, such as daily conversation, lyrics of song, and so on. The researcher suggests readers or students must know and understand about language function contained in the movie script. With we understand about the language function, we as the reader will go easier to understand the messages of the movie script. The researcher also expected that this research could be as reference to conduct other research especially language function