

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTION

A. Conclusion

By using the theory of Halliday and Hasan concept of cohesion in English, types of grammatical cohesion used in Brothers Grimm's fairytale. Firstly, all of the types of grammatical cohesion device are found in these selected stories but not all types of reference, substitution, ellipsis are found in these selected stories. In this fairytale the cohesive devices that mostly seen is reference, especially is personal reference. The writer use I, she, he, they, you we, him, her to referring some character in the story. For the substitution; the type found is nominal substitution, while for verbal and clausal do not found in both of the two different theme, animal and human being tale. For the elipsis, verbal elipsis is only type that found in this fairytale and it found in the animal tale while the researcher cannot found it in the human being tale. For the conjunction, in this type the researcher found all types, namely additive, adversative, causal and temporal. Almost of the story use all of these types of conjunctions to built the story.

Comparing all of the data from the selected stories, the researcher cannot found the different the use of grammatical cohesive devices, because almost all of the data showing that they use same type and there are no different between these two tale, Animal tale and Human being tale. They both use the same cohesive devices to make the story.

B. Suggestion

For the next researcher may prove this study by doing another study in this Brother Grimm's fairytale. For example, analyze some types of lexical cohesive devices in all stories or some of stories in this book, to explain how the lexical cohesion devices used in this fairytale. For the next writer also may do study using this Brother Grimm's fairytale to see the coherences that exist in this fairytale. All suggestions above may be used to prove the findings and conclusions of this study and to create the other study in the field of discourse analysis. But, not only the writer that must be understand about the function of grammatical devices, but reader also tend to understand about grammatical devices to make them easier to understand the text. Besides, the writer expects that this study will be useful as the reference for the next writer who interest in analyze of cohesive devices.