CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTION

In this chapter the researcher provides the conclusion and suggestion. The conclusion provides the answer of the main research problems in chapter I, yet the suggestion expects for the students, teacher or lecturer, and future researchers.

A. Conclusion

According to the previous chapter of the findings and discussion above, several conclusions can be formulated as follows : the types of transition words error found in students' writing paragraphs taught using online learning made by the second years students of English education department at IAIN Tulungagung academic year 2020/2021 was 29 omission (66%), 5 addition (11%), and 10 misformation (23%). The highest frequency of transition words error in paragraphs was omission which consists of 29 errors.

The reasons that contributes to the students' error in writing paragraph were less understanding of transition words, confusion in using transition words, familiarity with the mother tongue, using their own knowledge to translate and identifying the function of transition words, confusion with lecturer explanation and the material of transition words in online learning, misunderstanding the use of transition words and any difficulties creating a paragraph with the placement of transition words correctly.

B. Suggestion

As the conclusion of the research above, in brief the researcher provides some suggestions destine for the students, English teachers or English lecturers, and future researchers.

1. For the Students

    Some of suggestion for the students are expected to learn more about transition word in paragraph writing class to increase their knowledge so that can reduce the error of use the transition words, and the students should follow the direction of the teachers' response.

2. For the English Teacher or Lecturer

    For the English teacher or lecturer of paragraph writing class are suggested to explain the material at the beginning study during online learning and motivated the students to develop their ability of the use transition word.

3. For the Future Researcher

    The suggestion for future researchers who wants to carry out or do with the same research topic it can be referenced in order to get some the information. Another suggestion, the future researcher can use the different theory and large sample in conduct the research.